On her second trip this May, she found a circa-1965 vintage Bulova watchface at Micah Tasker's booth. He offered $125; Ali haggled him down to $80. Then, she put the face on an NOS (new old stock) band she'd gotten at the show earlier in the week. "All in all a very successful Brimfield!" she says. — What'd you find this weekend? Money can enrich our lives and put us into a position to enrich others. If we use our money smartly and intentionally, it has the power to bring about our hopes, dreams, desires and goals.By exploring why we use money, why we need money and the benefits of money, we can also recognize the disadvantages of earning and having money. Only when we learn what money is and how to treat it like a tool can we understand why it's so important.Why Do We Use Money? Photo Courtesy: narvikk/Getty Images The reasons we use money are a little more complicated than the fact that it allows us to buy things. Money represents exchanges within the economy, and nearly every society uses some form of currency as a means to pay for goods and services. Merriam-Webster defines money as "something generally accepted as a medium of exchange, a measure of value, or a means of payment" in the form of coins, paper notes or different types of accounts. The Oxford English Dictionary explains it as "Current coin; metal stamped in pieces of portable form as a medium of exchange and measure of value." Put simply, if you want to purchase something, then you'll have to give some form of money in return.At a national level, countries assign a central bank control over the production and distribution of money. For example, the United States went from the gold standard to the Federal Reserve System with the passing of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, explaining that it gives the country "a safer, more flexible, and more stable monetary and financial system."Why Do We Need Money? Photo Courtesy: Busakorn Pongpanit/Getty Images On a large scale, we need money as a means to regulate and stimulate the economy. On a more personal level, money helps us achieve our goals. Many people have a desire to raise children. Others are dedicated to a life of service, giving to those in need of various resources. All of us have some desire to maintain good health. And you might be hard-pressed to find someone who doesn't want to travel the world to experience different countries and cultures. All of these activities and goals require a considerable amount of money. And regulating money, whether by a national government or central bank, is the most accessible means to determine what is valid currency and what is not.Robert Kiyosaki of Rich Dad writes, "That's why money is important to me. Money is important, but I don't want to spend my life working for it." Essentially, it's helpful to have a balanced outlook on and attitude about money to be successful with it. Kiyosaki says, "The truth is that money isn't everything, but it does help us do everything we love."Benefits of Having Money Photo Courtesy: Halfpoint Images/Getty Images There are numerous benefits to having money. Not only does it help us do everything we love, but it also helps us help others. Some very generous people contribute their accumulated wealth to others in need. Money can lift spirits, and it can realize dreams. Money is also the pathway to adventure and security in retirement.You might agree with those who say that money is the root of all evil and cannot make us happy. But you might also have a dream to start a small business that you hope to leave to your children or expand into a larger venture to serve multiple communities. Money from investors, a large inheritance or even the lottery is often required for entrepreneurs to compete in a capitalistic society. This leads us to the downsides of having money.Downsides of Having Money Photo Courtesy: Westend61/Getty Images Money can cause happiness, in large part because it makes people feel secure. But money can also cause plenty of stress and anxiety. Being in debt is a significant concern among most people. In May 2019, a Gallup poll found that 56% of Americans generally feel pretty good about their financial situation. But, 45% of Americans believed their financial situation was between "only fair" and "poor." A staggering 25% of people who are "worried about money all of the time" are primarily afraid of retirement and unforeseen medical expenses.Another downside to money is the harm that it can cause. Money is used to exchange arms that oppress millions of people around the world. It can cause greed or a strong desire to accumulate resources simply to possess them, keeping those resources from being put to use to help people. When people think about the negative consequences of money, they often wonder how much of it is necessary to satisfy someone.How Much Money Is Enough? Photo Courtesy: The Good Brigade/Getty Images Some people might say too much money is never enough, while others believe in limiting how much wealth individuals and businesses should accumulate. It's been a debate within governments and ruling bodies for years. The answer is complicated and probably lies somewhere in between. There's only so much wealth a person can spend within their lifetime, and it may not be necessary for them to continue accumulating wealth beyond that — keeping it from others in the process.On the contrary, someone may want to accumulate enough wealth for future generations to live comfortably. Taking care of family and leaving a legacy is important to some people. It's a decision each individual has to make for themselves. How much do you and your family need to live a comfortable life through retirement? And how much do you need to help others?Why Is Money Necessary? Photo Courtesy: Peter Cade/Getty Images Money is necessary to further the cause of commerce. A healthy global economy means more opportunities for developing nations and people in need. Money is essential, but too much wealth in one area or in one person's hands can lead to an unbalanced class system.Money is necessary to accomplish objectives we've laid out on our personal life paths, and global markets require money to function. You can think of money as a tool to use to navigate these paths. Ultimately, because of the capitalistic economies of the countries we live in, money is necessary to improve our lives and the lives of those around us. MORE FROM ASKMONY.COM SEATTLE (MarketWatch) – What's safest for your "can't lose" savings? Federally insured bank accounts or uninsured money funds? This past week bank depositors got a sobering answer. NetBank in Alpharetta, Ga., was closed by the Office of Thrift Supervision last Friday, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) was named as receiver. All insured depositors became customers of ING Bank. Founded in 1996, NetBank was the nation's oldest Internet bank, but apparently had made too many subprime loans and relied too much on brokered deposits. When the squeeze came, the bank got caught with inadequate capital. According to the FDIC, ING Bank "acquired $1.4 billion in (insured) deposits and 104,000 new customers of NetBank for $14 million." That fire-sale price amounts to about one cent per dollar of deposits. An additional $109 million of uninsured NetBank deposits are worth 50 cents on the dollar now, and the FDIC will issue receiver certificates for the balance for payment at a later date. The bank also had $744 million in brokered deposits with an undisclosed amount of uninsured balances. FDIC will deal separately with the deposit brokers who had raised that money. FDIC Chairman Sheila Bair reported that since 1934 "not a single depositor has lost a penny of insured deposits. Customers of NetBank should have confidence and security knowing that they will have access to their insured funds in a timely and orderly manner." What about the $109 million of uninsured deposits? When will these people get the rest of their money? There are a lot of small businesses and retirement savers who have large balances. They are FDIC-insured up to $100,000 in checking accounts and $250,000 in IRAs, but for any amounts above that, get in line. Insurance policies There are several types of safe harbors for savers, and it's wise to consider the safety they afford you. FDIC insurance: FDIC's decision to make uninsured savers wait should serve as a wakeup call for overconfident savers who think the FDIC will cover all losses. Don't invest too much in one bank, and be careful the interest on your account doesn't put you over the insured limits. Money funds: Very simply, since money funds were first offered in the early 1970s, no consumer has ever lost money investing in them. Fixed annuities: These products are only as safe as the insurance company issuing them. A sobering thought is that the same agencies that rate insurers also rate the debt instruments whose subprime mortgage investments are the source of much of today's risk. You're as safe as your insurance company. State insurance regulators claim they are too understaffed to properly regulate the insurers. Variable annuities: These have the added advantage of investing your assets in mutual fund-like separate accounts that belong to the policyholder, not the insurer. Here, you're not tied to the insurance company's fortunes. Your cash value can be safe but any promised future benefits are only as safe as the insurer. SIPC insurance: This is offered by stockbrokers and protects your rights to the securities in your account, but not necessarily your timely access to them. If the stock market is falling and your broker closes its doors, you may not be able to access your account for months. U.S. Treasuries: These bonds are backed by the federal government, have always paid back investors' principal at maturity and are interest rate-sensitive. Rising rates shrink their value and falling rates boost it. Look for the duration and you will know how much you will lose if interest rates on similar-maturity bonds rise a single percentage point or how much you will gain if rates fall. Typical intermediate-term bond funds often have durations of five years or more. Safe harbors are often not what you expect them to be: Treasury bonds can be losing bets, uninsured money funds can be as safe as insured CDs, insurance company fixed annuities can be riskier than annuities that allow you to invest in the stock market, and what appears to be a money fund might be a bank account. Know your risk.
